Why timber?

Keep your family warm and healthy.

Timber joinery is an elegant and practical choice for your windows and doors. The naturally stylish character of timber can be crafted to suit your home and lifestyle. You can have your doors and windows stained to enhance their warm earthy tones, or painted to complement your décor.

Timber is robust and long-lasting too. Properly finished and maintained, you can expect decades of easy and reliable operation from your windows and doors.

Timber not only looks good, it performs well too. It's a natural thermal insulator and is therefore a healthy choice for your family. In fact, tests show that heat loss through timber window frames is significantly less than for a standard aluminium frame. Timber helps to keep your home cool in summer and warm in winter—and reduces your cooling and heating costs.

With changes to the Building Code stressing greater energy efficiency and insulation, timber is your logical choice.

We choose to use Western Red Cedar for all our doors and sashes. This hard-wearing softwood has a remarkably fine and stable grain structure that won't warp or twist, ensuring years of reliable opening and closing. And we use long-lasting Radiata Pine for our frames. Other timber options are available to suit your design.

I have been using Dando for all my timber windows, doors and joinery supplies for many years. I have always had excellent service and very clear communication.

With regards to timeframes, the process is simple and documented, so always meets my expectations. Pricing is competitive in today's market, along with quality products and workmanship.

Above all for me, the most important thing by far is the experience and best-suited options that I can pass on to my clients, with regards to their joinery requirements.

Licensed Renovations

Care and maintenance.

Looking after your new joinery.

Joinery should be painted properly in clean, dry conditions prior to installation and exposure to weather, ensuring full coverage and sealing of all surfaces (sides, tops and bottoms). Exterior joinery should be painted or sealed with a quality produce resilient to UV, and following the coating manufacturer's instructions and advice.

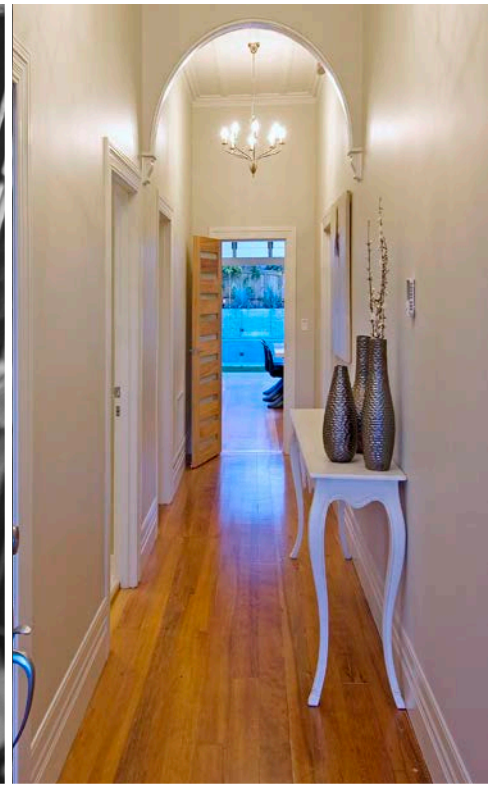

A complete waterproof skin must be maintained at all times on all edges. Routine maintenance for joinery includes re-coating when wear or breakdown becomes apparent. Re-coats should be applied at an early stage of breakdown to ensure the integrity of the seal is maintained. Failure to do so will cause rapid deterioration. Painting exterior joinery in dark colours should be avoided on any joinery that is exposed to sun or heat.

“

We have found Dando to be a well-organised business, quotes are received in a prompt manner, and we've been happy with the joinery they produce.

Keep up the good work!
